

The Center for Research on Race and Ethnicity in Society (CRRES)
presents

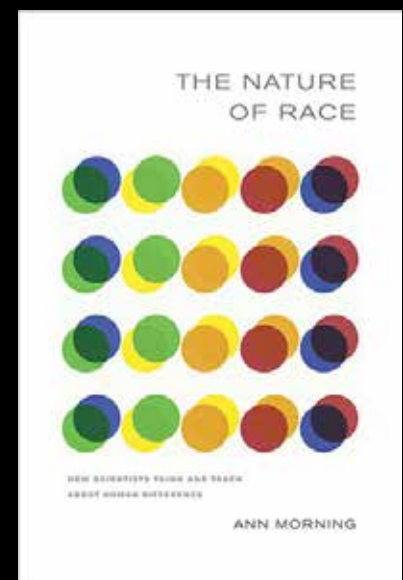

DEBATING THE NATURE OF RACE

Dueling Concepts of Human Difference

Ann Morning
Department of Sociology
New York University

Monday, September 29, 2014
Oak Room, Indiana Memorial Union
2:30-4:00pm
Refreshments to Follow

Ann Morning is an Associate Professor of Sociology at New York University and a faculty affiliate of NYU Abu Dhabi. Her research interests include race, demography, and the sociology of science, especially as they pertain to census classification worldwide and to individuals' concepts of racial difference. Dr. Morning was a member of the National Academies of Science 2007-2011 Standing Committee on Research and Evidentiary Standards, and is currently a member of the U.S. Census Bureau's National Advisory Committee on Racial, Ethnic and Other Populations. Her book, The Nature of Race: How Scientists Think and Teach about Human Difference (University of California Press, 2011) examines how scientists influence our views on race.

CENTER FOR RESEARCH ON RACE & ETHNICITY
IN SOCIETY

ARTS & SCIENCES

CRRES SPEAKER SERIES
2014-2015